THE MARCHIONESS OF SALISBURY

Lady Salisbury has designed gardens and landscapes throughout Italy, France, Ireland, the US and England. By absorbing the character and atmosphere of a place, including the house – inside and out – and the surrounding countryside, she aims to achieve harmony and sympathy and to enhance the relationship between the garden and its surroundings.

TIM REES AND BRITA VON SCHOENAICH

Schoenaich Rees Landscape Architects was founded in 1991 by Tim Rees and Brita von Schoenaich. They work in both the private and public sector, and their projects are characterized by their naturalistic planting and formal, structural designs. They believe that garden landscapes should represent a fusion of the geology, plants and the unique spirit of each location.

TOM STUART-SMITH

Tom Stuart-Smith read Landscape Design at Manchester University and has practised landscape architecture for seventeen years. In 1989, he became a director of Elizabeth Banks Associates, working mainly on historic gardens, and in 1998 he set up his own practice, so that he could concentrate on fewer projects. Tom has won three gold medals at Chelsea Flower Show.

ANDY STURGEON

Andy Sturgeon's design practice takes a creative but practical approach to garden design, with planting influenced by art and architecture. His designs tend to be sleek and stylish with an emphasis on detail, and range from a fusion of old and new to ultra-modern. Andy uses traditional materials – stone, wood and metal – in a modern way. Lighting is crucial and the plants themselves paramount.
